

Careers in History

Historian:

Research and analyse historical documents, artefacts, and records. Contribute to a deeper understanding of the past, publishing findings in academic journals or books.

Archaeologist:

Excavate and analyse artefacts to reconstruct and interpret past cultures. Work on-site to uncover and preserve historical sites, contributing to our understanding of ancient civilisations.

Lawyer:

Specialise in areas such as heritage law, using legal expertise to protect cultural assets. Advocate for historical preservation and represent clients in cases involving historical matters.

Museum Curator:

Develop and curate exhibits, selecting and displaying historical artefacts. Manage collections, ensuring the preservation and proper documentation of items.

Public Relations Officer:

Promote historical organisations, events, and exhibits to the public. Enhance the public's awareness and appreciation of historical initiatives through strategic communication.

Genealogist:

Trace and research family histories and lineages. Assist individuals in discovering their roots and understanding their familial connections.

Careers in History

Journalist:

Report on historical events, providing context and analysis. Convey historical narratives through engaging and informative articles.

Politician:

Advocate for policies that preserve and promote historical heritage. Use political influence to support initiatives related to historical awareness and education.

Heritage Officer:

Develop and implement programmes to protect and promote cultural heritage. Collaborate with communities to ensure the preservation of local historical sites.

Tour Guide:

Lead historical tours, sharing insights about significant landmarks and events. Provide engaging narratives that bring history to life for tour participants.

Education Officer:

Develop curriculum materials and educational programmes related to history. Facilitate workshops and events to enhance historical education in schools and communities.

Archivist:

Organise and manage historical documents, photographs, and records. Ensure the proper preservation and accessibility of archival materials.

Careers in History

Teacher:

Educate students on historical events, cultures, and concepts. Foster a passion for history and critical thinking skills among students.

Writer:

Craft historical narratives in various forms, including books, articles, or blogs. Contribute to the dissemination of historical knowledge to a broader audience.

Librarian:

Curate historical collections in libraries. Assist researchers in accessing historical resources and information.

Lecturer:

Teach history at the tertiary level, conducting in-depth research and sharing expertise. Contribute to academic discourse through lectures and publications.

Conservator:

Preserve and restore historical artefacts, ensuring their longevity. Apply expertise in materials and techniques to maintain the integrity of historical items.

Auction Dealer:

Source and evaluate historical artefacts for auction. Facilitate the sale of historical items to collectors and institutions.

Careers in History

Historical Consultant for Film/TV/Gaming:

Provide expertise to ensure historical accuracy in visual media projects.
Collaborate with production teams to recreate historical settings authentically.

Research Analyst:

Analyse historical data and trends to provide insights.
Contribute to research projects in areas such as social, economic, or political history.

Policy Analyst:

Utilise historical trends to inform policy decisions.
Contribute to the development of government and organisational policies based on historical analysis.

Famous People in History

Peter Jackson:

Award-winning film director known for "The Lord of the Rings" trilogy. Holds a degree in English and History from the University of Auckland.

Eva Green:

French actress known for her roles in films like "Casino Royale" and "Penny Dreadful" series. Holds a degree in history from the American University of Paris.

Tom Holland:

British historian and author specializing in ancient history. Holds a degree in history from Queens' College, Cambridge.

Graham Norton:

Irish comedian, television host, and author. Holds a degree in history and English from University College, Cork.

Jodie Whittaker:

English actress, known for being the first female Doctor in "Doctor Who." Holds a degree in acting from the Guildhall School of Music and Drama.

Dermot O'Leary:

British television presenter and radio host. Holds a degree in media and television from Middlesex University.